

The Values Compass.

Your real values hide in moments, not in nice words. Work down the page: mine the evidence, name what's underneath, cut to five, and turn your top value into a question you can use.

01 Mine your evidence, not your ideals

Three moments from the last year when you felt most alive, and three when you felt most resentful or drained. Fragments are fine. Don't interpret yet.

✦ MOST ALIVE

1 _____

2 _____

3 _____

✦ MOST RESENTFUL

1 _____

2 _____

3 _____

02 Name the value under each moment

For each alive moment: what was being honored? For each resentful one: what was being violated? Resentment fires when something you value is being stepped on.

1 → _____

2 → _____

3 → _____

1 → _____

2 → _____

3 → _____

03 Cut the list to five

The test for each: "Have I sacrificed something real to protect this?" If not, it's an aspiration, not a value. Aspirations are fine, but they don't belong on the compass.

1 _____

2 _____

3 _____

4 _____

5 _____

04 Write your decision filter

Circle your top value above, then turn it into a single question you can ask in the moment. When you're stuck, you don't need more options — you need a sharper filter.

Template: "Does this protect my _____, or trade it away?"

Mine: _____